Introduction

This resource has been produced in two different formats:

- a self-access resource for learners with online activities
- this teacher's pack, including teacher's notes and worksheets to download

Overview

This resource, Someone at the door – Charity collection is part of Unit 1 of English in my home, which aims to give ESOL learners the confidence and the language to deal with situations they may encounter in their homes.

There are three units of English in my home:

Unit 1 Someone at the door aims to give learners confidence and equip them with the language necessary to deal with situations where unexpected callers (e.g. an electricity meter reader) arrive at the door.

Unit 2 Someone on the phone shows how to deal with incoming phone calls from a range of people. This includes unwanted calls (e.g. marketing cold calls).

Unit 3 Something in the post features some common types of mail that people receive (e.g. a utility bill), and enables learners to understand what the text means, and to know what to do in response.

Level: Entry 2 / Access 3 in Scotland / CEF A2. The materials are designed to be flexible in terms of differentiation, and are accessible to established E2 learners and at the same time relevant to E1, as well as E3 and L1.

Structure, learning hours and delivery context

English in my home provides a minimum of 11 hours of learning in a classroom or self-access context through a series of three linked units. Each unit can be taught as a standalone. Here is an overview of the content of each unit. Each unit has four topics:

Unit 1: Someone at the door (includes films)

- Topic a: Electricity meter reading
- Topic b: Charity collection (the focus of this set of resources)
- Topic c: Parcel delivery
- Topic d: The neighbour

Unit 2: Someone on the phone (includes films)

- Topic a: Cold call
- Topic b: Wrong number
- Topic c: An emergency
- Topic d: Getting a plumber

Unit 3: Something in the post

- Topic a: Bank statement
- Topic b: Phone bill
- Topic c: Attempted delivery note
- Topic d: Note from a neighbour

Each of the four topics in Someone at the door and Someone on the phone features a short film. These films have been scripted specifically for the project, and involve actors. The two central characters are a married Indian couple, who have recently moved to the UK, and who are getting used to life here. Each film focuses on them in a specific scenario, such as dealing with a meter reader who arrives at their flat, or dealing with unwanted cold calls on the telephone. ESOL learners should be able to relate to the experiences of the couple.

The learner materials and teacher notes contain activities for use before, during and after watching the films. They enable the learners to notice, learn and use some of the functional language featured in the films.

Something in the post, uses semi-authentic material of the kinds that learners may receive in their home, and helps them to understand these and know what action is needed.

Most topics provide approximately 60 minutes of classroom time. Units 1 and 2 can last longer if teachers choose to use the transcripts, for example by getting the learners to act out sections of the dialogues.

Unit 1 Someone at the door: overview

The unit provides up to 4 hours of classroom time, and covers 4 topics. Each topic features a short film, commissioned by the British Council for the ESOL Nexus project, and filmed with professional actors. The films aim to show real-life situations in which ESOL learners may find themselves, and the accompanying classroom and self-study materials aim to give learners the language they need to deal with a range of household situations.

The topics of Someone at the door are called Electricity meter reading, Charity collection, Parcel delivery and The neighbour and can be used in any order.

Unit 1b Someone at the door: Charity collection – teacher's notes

Time:

Over 1 hour. Timings are flexible.

Aims

- to enable learners to deal with unexpected visitors to their home

Objectives

All learners will be able to:

- learn and use some common phrases to use when someone comes to their home

Some learners will be able to:

- determine whether a visitor to their home is who they say they are
- retell the story

Preparation

You will need:

- learner resources (pages 10-12 of this document) – one copy per learner
- transcript – pages 13 - 14
- additional resources for teachers:
cut-up copies of Task 1 (page 15) - one per pair
cut-up copies of Task 4 role cards (page 16) - one copy for each group of 5 learners
- data projector and internet connection to show the film Charity collection

Before the class, study the role-play task and role cards carefully, as the role-play is quite involved, and needs to be set up very carefully.

Procedure

Elicit the word charity by showing images of charity shops. You can search online for these.

Get the learners to discuss the following questions in small groups. Dictate the questions to give your learners practice of listening to streams of sound.

- What charity shops are there in <your area>?
- Who or what does the charity help?
- How else can charities earn money?
- Do you sometimes give money to charity? Which ones? How do you do it?

Conduct brief feedback. Bring up the subject of people collecting money for charity on the street, and door-to-door collections. Ask whether the learners would give to these people, and why / why not. At this stage, pre-teach donate money to charity, make a donation to charity.

Explain that you are going to show a film featuring a young Indian couple who live in the UK. In the film, two men come to their flat.

First viewing: understanding the film: detail

Write the following questions on the board.

1. Why did the men come to the flat?
2. What do the husband and wife think about the men?

Play the film (Charity collection). After viewing, ask the learners to discuss the gist questions in small groups. You could conduct an opinion poll with a show of hands to indicate whether the learners think the men are really collecting money for charity.

Answers:

1. They are pretending to collect money for charity. The men probably aren't really collecting for charity and want to keep any money they do collect for themselves.
2. The husband believes the men; the wife does not.

Task 1: understanding the film: detail

Note – you can use the cut-up cards under 'Additional resources' on page 15 for this task, if you think your learners would prefer a more kinaesthetic approach.

Explain that the husband's name is Arjun; the wife's is Sunita. Distribute one set of the cut-up cards to each pair, and ask the learners to put them in order as the events happen in the film. (The first is done as an example.) Play the film again, if you discover while monitoring that the learners need to watch it again.

During feedback, you could write the sentences in the correct order on the board, model and drill the sentences for pronunciation practice, and gradually rub out individual words.

Two men knock on the door, and Arjun opens it. could then become

Two men _____ on the door, and Arjun opens it. then

Two men _____ on the door, and Arjun _____ it. etc

Get the learners to practise saying the sentences individually and to each other in pairs, and then to retell each other the whole story.

Task 2: useful phrases for talking with charity collectors

Ask the learners to look at Task 2, and choose which word the speakers used. Play the film so learners can check their answers but point out the ordering of the sentences.

Drill the phrases and check understanding. (They will need to use these phrases later in the role-play.)

Using the transcript

Distribute the transcript (pages 13 and 14) for the learners to find and underline the phrases from Task 2 as they are used in the film. The word crook is likely to be new to learners, but having seen the film, the learners should have some idea what it means.

Task 3: acting

If you think your learners will enjoy it, put them into groups of 4 to act out the dialogue. Ask them to allocate roles for each learner. Monitor, and help with pronunciation and intonation. After reading the transcript once or twice, stronger learners could put the paper away and try to recreate the dialogue (approximately). Alternatively, two in each group (ideally the stronger ones) could put the paper away, and then recreate the dialogue.

Task 4: role-play

Overview

This role-play involves a series of callers visiting people in their home. The aim of the role-play is for the householders to decide who they should let into their home, and who they shouldn't, and for the learners to practise using the useful phrases from Task 2.

NB – the role-play is quite challenging (as it involves a degree of deliberate deception by Learner E), and needs to be set up very carefully.

The role-play has 5 different roles:

Learners A are people in their own home

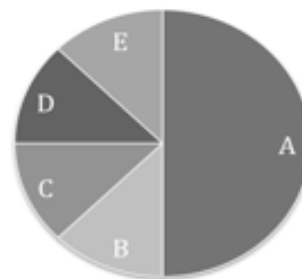

Learners B, C, and D are genuine callers.

Learners E are crooks whose task is to lie and convince the householders that they are genuine callers, without anyone finding out that they are crooks.

Differentiation – as Learner E probably has the most challenging role, put stronger learners in this group.

Setting up the activity

Divide the class into two equal-sized groups. One half is group A. Divide the remaining learners into 4 equal-sized groups, B, C, D, and E. Give out the role cards, a Learner A role card to everyone in group A, a Learner B role card to everyone in group B, and likewise for C, D, and E. The proportion of learners should be roughly as shown here:

Allow the learners a few minutes to read and digest their role cards. You will need to circulate and ensure that everyone understands what their role is. Be prepared to explain honest and crook again.

You could suggest to groups B, C and D that they use their learner ID card as the ID card from their employer (the charity / plumbing firm etc).

Ensure that the other learners do not realise that group E are crooks; the object of the activity is for the Learner As to identify who is genuine, and who isn't.

For the role-play itself, you will need to arrange the room appropriately. Tell the group As (the householders) to sit in their 'homes' around the room. The callers then mingle, visiting any householder who is currently free to keep the activity flowing.

Differentiation – any weaker learners could be paired up with another learner from the same group (whether A, B, C, D or E).

Before beginning the role-play, recap the useful phrases again:

- What's the name of your charity?
- Can I see your ID? etc.

After the activity

Elicit group feedback by asking individual Learner As which callers they spoke to, and whether they thought they were genuine or not. Then the learner mentioned finally reveals their true identity.

Extension

Here are some ideas for activities you could do after using the learner resources for unit 1b: Someone at the door: Charity collection.

- In groups, ask the learners to find about charities in their town or area.
- Get the learners to prepare and carry out an interview with staff working in charity shops in the learners' town or area.

Refer learners to the online versions of these ESOL Nexus activities about Charity Collection:
