

New to ESOL Outcomes

PART 1: Overview of learners and provision

For ESOL commissioners, providers and practitioners on the delivery of 'pre-Entry' ESOL provision.

October 2021

EDUCATION & TRAINING FOUNDATION

PART 1 CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION	2
Who is this guide for?	2
How the framework was developed	2
Overview of contents	3
PART 1: OVERVIEW OF NEW TO ESOL LEARNERS AND PROVISION	4
ESOL Learners	4
ESOL Levels	4
'Pre-Entry' Level ESOL	4
New to ESOL Learners	4
New to ESOL and Learning Difficulties and Disabilities	5
Literacy and New to ESOL Learners	5
Types of New to ESOL Provision	7
Course Duration and Intensity in New to ESOL Provision	8
Online Learning in New to ESOL Provision	9
Funding New to ESOL Provision	10
New to ESOL Practitioners	10
Teaching and Learning	11
New to ESOL Outcomes	12
FURTHER RESOURCES	13
Teaching and Learning Resources for New to ESOL Learners	13
Teaching and Learning - Further Reading	14
Awarding Organisations	14
Outcomes Measures and Approaches	14

INTRODUCTION

Background

In 2018/19, the Education and Training Foundation (ETF) commissioned Learning and Work Institute (L&W) and Learning Unlimited (LU) to research and develop resources to support ESOL practitioners working with learners at 'pre-Entry' and Entry 1. This work resulted in a suite of resources entitled New to ESOL, comprising 20 units of teaching and learning materials, effective practice guidance and a screening tool. The materials are accompanied by a report summarising key findings from research with the ESOL sector to inform the development of the New to ESOL materials¹.

Who is this guide for?

This guide sets out information for commissioners, providers, practitioners and other stakeholders involved in the delivery of 'pre-Entry' ESOL provision, referred to here as New to ESOL. It accompanies the New to ESOL Outcomes Framework, which you find in part 2 of this publication.

Note on terminology

L&W's 2018/19 research noted differences in the usage of the term 'pre-Entry' in various contexts such as educational provision, immigration and employment support. The ESOL sector expressed divergent views on the suitability of the term². We therefore use the term 'New to ESOL' to describe 'pre-Entry' provision and learners, reflecting that in most cases – although not all – learners will be relatively new to learning ESOL and literacy skills, and often recently arrived in the UK.

This research suggested that there is a lack of consensus in the ESOL sector on suitable provision for 'pre-Entry' ESOL learners, and on the outcomes for learners that commissioners and funders can expect to be realised. Building on the New to ESOL project, this outcomes framework was commissioned in 2019/20 by ETF to help address this longstanding challenge in the ESOL sector. The New to ESOL resources and development of this framework also support implementation of the Government's Integrated Communities Action Plan, which committed to developing new resources to support 'pre-Entry' ESOL provision³.

How the framework was developed

This outcomes framework has been informed by extensive ESOL sector engagement, building on the 2018/19 research. The development process has

¹ <https://esol.excellencegateway.org.uk/learners-new-esol>

² See the New to ESOL research report: <https://esol.excellencegateway.org.uk/content/etf3074>

³ <https://www.gov.uk/government/publications/integrated-communities-action-plan> involved:

- A desk review of relevant 'pre-Entry' ESOL resources, curriculum frameworks and Awarding Organisation specifications.
- A review of examples of ESOL providers' course planning documents for 'pre-Entry' ESOL, sourced through a call for evidence to the sector, which yielded 18 examples
- A 'snapshot' survey of the sector to obtain views on the point of transition from 'pre-Entry' to Entry 1 ESOL, which received 94 responses
- Engagement with ESOL stakeholders, including refugee resettlement organisations, local authorities, Mayoral Combined Authorities with devolved Adult Education Budget commissioning powers, the Department for Education, the Home Office and the Ministry of Housing, Communities and Local Government.
- In-depth telephone interviews with 10 ESOL stakeholders and specialists.
- Sector feedback on the draft framework, from ESOL providers, practitioners and an expert panel.

Overview of contents

This is Part 1 (of 2) of the New to ESOL Outcomes Framework

Part 1: Overview of New to ESOL Learners and Provision will be of particular interest to wider ESOL stakeholders and commissioners who wish to understand more about this aspect of ESOL provision. It is intended for non-specialists. The Further Resources section contains links and references to additional research, guidance and resources that will be useful to ESOL providers, practitioners, commissioners and stakeholders.

Part 2: Outcomes Framework is available as a separate document. It is aimed primarily at ESOL providers and practitioners, to support course planning. It also aims to help commissioners and wider stakeholders understand some of the key outcomes that can be expected from New to ESOL provision. Alongside speaking, listening, reading and writing outcomes, it includes suggestions for a range of wider outcomes, and examples of possible approaches to measuring these.

PART 1: OVERVIEW OF NEW TO ESOL LEARNERS AND PROVISION

ESOL Learners

People with ESOL needs tend to be from four main groups: those from settled communities living in Britain; spouses, partners and dependents of British or EU citizens; migrant workers; and refugees and asylum seekers.

ESOL learners can include people who are highly educated, have had professional careers and are highly skilled as well as those who have very little or no English and/or who may not have completed basic schooling.

ESOL Levels

ESOL proficiency levels relate to both skills and the qualifications achieved. The Adult ESOL Core Curriculum⁴ gives much more detail about ESOL levels, but, in brief they are:

- Entry (sub-divided into Entry 1, 2 and 3)
- Level 1
- Level 2 (the highest level of ESOL qualification).

‘Pre-Entry’ Level ESOL

The term ‘pre-Entry’ level has been widely used to refer to ESOL learners who are not yet ready to access Entry 1 level, and provision intended to meet these learning needs. The Adult ESOL Core Curriculum recognises ‘pre-Entry’ learning needs within Entry 1, but in practical terms there is a need to cater for learners facing barriers to accessing the full Entry 1 curriculum, such as the need to develop basic literacy skills, or more time to consolidate their learning.

Providers sometimes use other terms, including beginner learners, emerging Entry 1 or working towards Entry 1. As the term ‘pre-Entry’ originally referred to the curriculum framework for learners with learning difficulties and/or disabilities, some ESOL providers, practitioners and stakeholders consider that this term is inappropriate, as it risks conflating low levels of language proficiency with a learning disability.

This framework uses the term ‘New to ESOL’ to refer to learners who are not yet ready to access Entry 1 provision.

New to ESOL Learners

While ESOL practitioners and stakeholders noted considerable diversity amongst New to ESOL learners, it is possible to identify various characteristics that frequently occur:

Learners may have:

- very limited speaking and listening skills in English, e.g. just a few words
- few or very limited literacy skills, in English and/or in other languages they use
- no, or very limited, previous formal education

⁴ <https://www.excellencegateway.org.uk/content/etf1194>

- little exposure to English in everyday life in the UK, e.g. if socially isolated

As part of the New to ESOL teaching and learning materials, a screening tool⁵ is available. Providers can use it, as part of their initial assessment processes, to help determine whether a learner would be best placed in Entry 1 or in New to ESOL provision.

Although there are divergent views, ESOL practitioners and stakeholders tended to suggest that for some learners, New to ESOL provision would not be most appropriate, despite low levels of English proficiency:

- Learners who are newly arrived with no or little English speaking and listening, but a high level of previous education, are more likely to make good progress. They may find a New to ESOL class not challenging enough so may be better off starting in or progressing to an Entry 1 class.
- Most ESOL learners have ‘spiky profiles’⁶, but if a learner has little or no literacy, and very much higher speaking and listening skills, this presents a challenge in respect of the usual provider practice of organising formal provision by level.

An ideal solution for these learning needs would be to place the learner in specialist ESOL literacy classes corresponding to these profiles. However, practical constraints may mean that providers have to choose between placing a learner into a New to ESOL class, or into a class that is appropriate to their speaking and listening proficiency levels. Either way, practitioners will need effective differentiation strategies to meet the specific needs of these learners. Many providers try to offer smaller class sizes in New to ESOL provision to support this.

New to ESOL and Learning Difficulties and Disabilities

It can sometimes be challenging to determine whether learners have a learning difficulty or disability at New to ESOL level. This is because many of the tools used to identify learning disabilities rely on language (that the learner does not have) to inform the assessment. This may mean learners need additional time and/or specialist support to have their needs identified, and to progress. Whilst it is not unusual for New to ESOL learners to require a significant amount of time to develop language skills, if this persists specialist advice may be required (see Part 1, Further Resources).

Literacy and New to ESOL Learners

There is consensus in the ESOL sector that, very often, literacy is a key consideration within New to ESOL provision. Without adequate literacy, learners are unable to fully benefit from their learning experiences, e.g. read class texts, record new vocabulary, etc. For this reason, the literacy outcomes have been separated into Reading and Writing.

There are different kinds of literacy needs which New to ESOL learners need:

- Learners with little previous education can take longer to acquire both written and spoken language as they lack learning strategies and do not have a pre-existing framework on which to ‘hang’ their new learning. The same language items may need to be repeated many times in different contexts for learners to retain them.

⁵ <https://www.excellencegateway.org.uk/content/etf3067>

⁶ This is where a learner has a different level of skills in speaking, listening, reading and writing.

- Learners may not realise that words and symbols on pages represent meaning. Similarly, they may not realise that there is a relationship between the words that we speak, the letters on a page and the sounds the letters make.
- The learner's first language may use a very different script to English and may also, for example, go from right to left.
- Learners may not have developed the physical skills for writing, such as how to adopt a helpful body posture for writing, how to hold a pen correctly, how to write on a line or the use of fine motor skills to control a pen.

All of the above can result in learners being unable to cope with an Entry 1 class. They will need a longer programme of learning before they are able to engage in learning at Entry 1 level. Many providers also try to offer smaller class sizes in New to ESOL provision to support learners at this level.

Table 1 below provides a summary of different kinds of literacy⁷. For further information on the key features of languages typically spoken by New to ESOL learners, see the *New to ESOL Guidance*⁸.

⁷ Young-Scholten, M., Ritchie, Y., Musa, R. (2018) 'European Speakers of Other Languages: Teaching Adult Immigrants and Training their Teachers'. Available at: <https://research.ncl.ac.uk/eu-speak/project-finalbookinfivelanguages/english/English%20M-Event%20volume%20done%2029%20Oct%202018.pdf> (Last accessed 05.01.21)

⁸ <https://esol.excellencegateway.org.uk/content/etf3083>

Table 1: Types of literacy

Types of literacy	Explanation
Non-literate	Learners have had no access to literacy instruction, but they live in a literate society.
Pre-literate	The learner's first language has no written form or is in the process of developing a written form (e.g. some American indigenous, African, Australian, and Pacific languages have no written form).
Semi-literate	Learners have limited access to literacy instruction, or have some reading and writing skills in their first language but are not functionally literate.
Non-alphabet literate	Learners are literate in a language written in a non-alphabetic script (e.g. Mandarin Chinese).
Non-Roman alphabet literate	Learners are literate in a language written in a non-Roman alphabet (e.g. Arabic, Greek, Korean, Russian, and Thai). Direction of reading varies.
Roman alphabet literate	Learners are literate in a language written in a Roman alphabet script (e.g. French, German, and Spanish). They read from left to right and recognise letter shapes and fonts. ¹

Whilst literacy development is often a key learning need and a focus of learning in New to ESOL provision, it is important to note that some learners will continue to have literacy needs even after progressing to further learning.

Achievement of basic literacy outcomes in New to ESOL provision does not mean that a learner will have no further literacy learning needs at higher ESOL levels. Providers and practitioners will need to consider ways of meeting these needs within higher level ESOL provision, and adopt appropriate, differentiated teaching and learning strategies, especially where discrete ESOL literacy provision is not practically feasible.

The prominence of basic literacy needs does not preclude the development of speaking and listening skills in New to ESOL provision. Developing these skills, as well as recognising, understanding and producing the sounds and words of English, is a prerequisite for being able to read and write. And, for many New to ESOL learners, their main motivation to participate in learning will be to improve everyday spoken communication skills in English.

Types of New to ESOL Provision

New to ESOL provision can be in various settings, from colleges to community settings, with various models of delivery, and ranges from formal to informal models. Often, class sizes are smaller than in ESOL provision at higher levels, reflecting the amount of teacher support required.

- Most provision is non-accredited, although in settings such as Further Education colleges and Adult Community Education, delivery will still retain many of the features of formal learning. Provision that is delivered in community venues is not automatically informal.

- In formal (but non-accredited) settings, quality systems such as Recognising and Recording Progress and Achievement (RARPA) will apply, for example in provision funded through the Adult Education Budget. RARPA is a quality assurance process for monitoring the progress and achievement of learners on non-accredited learning programmes.⁹
- Some learners may lack the confidence or experience of learning to attend a more formal ESOL setting. In these cases, non-formal or informal learning may be more appropriate such as working with a home tutor or a speaking practice buddy (often a volunteer) on a one-to-one basis.
- Examples of non-formal learning include community-based classes and drop-ins which may be run on a walk-in basis, in contrast to formal provision. Informal learning can include volunteer-led conversation or other activity-based clubs, where learners can develop skills with others in a more social setting.
- Some ESOL stakeholders identified that informal learning often only focuses on speaking and listening. This can be useful to build learners' confidence, but learners will also often require and ask for support with literacy skills. This is important when learners are offered informal provision as an option while waiting for formal classes.
- The availability of childcare provision, and transport costs, are widely noted by ESOL stakeholders as significant barriers faced by learners to accessing provision. This requires consideration by commissioners and providers when planning delivery.
- In some areas, local ESOL 'hubs' will be able to provide an overview of the kinds of provision available, and the associated eligibility criteria. Areas with 'hubs' operating at the time of writing include Yorkshire and the Humber¹⁰, Manchester¹¹ and Camden¹².
- New to ESOL learners may experience different routes through to Entry 1. In particular, many encounter various types of voluntary provision before accessing informal community classes or more formal provision in, for instance, a college.

For further information on considerations when placing a learner into provision, see the New to ESOL Screening Guidance.¹³

Course Duration and Intensity in New to ESOL Provision

- Depending on learners' needs, different kinds of provision may be more or less suitable. Most learners at this level need provision over a longer period of time as repetition is needed to facilitate retention and to assist learners to become independent learners in the future.

⁹ <https://www.learningandwork.org.uk/resource/updated-rarpa-guidance-and-case-studies/>

¹⁰ <https://www.learningenglish.org.uk/>

¹¹ <https://manchesteresol.org/>

¹² <https://www.camden.gov.uk/camden-esol-advice-service>

¹³ <https://www.excellencegateway.org.uk/content/etf3067>

- New to ESOL learners may find it difficult to sustain intensive periods of classroom-based learning each week. This can be due to a lack of experience of formal learning or pre-existing health conditions. For example, some refugee learners have experienced trauma that leads to difficulties in maintaining concentration. This can, in part, be addressed by offering variety in opportunities for learning and practising English, such as informal, activity-based conversation sessions alongside formal classroom learning.
- It is difficult to establish an optimal number of course hours and intensity for New to ESOL provision. Factors such as varying literacy levels, prior experience of education, exposure to English in the community and aptitude for learning all influence how quickly an individual learner will progress. However, ESOL provider feedback and a range of research evidence suggest¹⁴ that a substantial number (in the region of several hundred) of course hours is required to support New to ESOL learners to progress to Entry 1.
- The type of provider, source of funding used, and learner needs will all influence what providers are able to offer. ESOL providers and practitioners have identified that programmes of very short duration or limited learning hours are likely to be insufficient for New to ESOL learners to make substantial progress. Shorter courses and/or a lower number of course hours will therefore deliver fewer of the possible language and wider outcomes indicated in this framework.
- If the only courses available are short and/or low intensity, learners may therefore need to attend a number of New to ESOL courses until they progress to higher levels of ESOL.

Online Learning in New to ESOL Provision

Providers' experiences during the coronavirus pandemic highlight challenges and barriers to online delivery of New to ESOL provision. These can include:

- Barriers to online learning through digital exclusion, such as the lack of a suitable device, reliable internet connection, or prohibitive data costs.
- Learners' basic digital skills (often requiring literacy) being insufficient to access and use providers' online learning platforms, websites and other resources.
- Learners not having sufficient study skills to complete learning activities independently online.

New to ESOL learners are therefore likely to benefit from face-to-face delivery. Extensive practical and learning support are likely to be necessary if elements of their programme are expected to be delivered online.

It can be beneficial to develop learners' basic digital skills alongside English language skills. Many learners have access to smartphones, which, with support from teachers, they can use to assist their language learning, for example by using translation apps. Basic digital skills are included in the wider outcomes section of the New to ESOL Outcomes Framework.

¹⁴ See, for example, Schellekens, P (2001) English as a Barrier to Employment, Education and Training. Department for Education and Skills Research Report.

From August 2020, the Adult Education Budget (AEB) funding entitlement, framework and national standards for essential digital skills support providers to deliver new essential digital skills qualifications.¹⁵

Links to further information to support online delivery are included in Part 1, Further Resources.

Funding New to ESOL Provision

Eligibility for ESOL programmes and funding, including any requirements to contribute towards course costs, depends on factors such as an adult's immigration and employment status, and the requirements of the particular funding source a provider is using.

- 'Non-regulated', i.e. non-accredited provision for 'pre-Entry' ESOL courses, can be funded through the Adult Education Budget (AEB). This is the primary source of ESOL funding for Further Education colleges and local authority Adult Community Education services.
- The Education and Skills Funding Agency (ESFA) publishes the Adult Education Budget Funding Rules each academic year on the gov.uk website, which set out the eligibility criteria. ESOL providers and curriculum managers should ensure that they are familiar with the full flexibility of the AEB to support New to ESOL provision.
- In London, and in some Mayoral Combined Authorities¹⁶, control of the AEB has been devolved to local commissioners, and in some cases ESOL provision is identified as a priority. Providers in AEB devolution areas should ensure they are familiar with any local guidance on ESOL funding.
- Not all ESOL providers are ESFA funded and many ESOL providers make use of multiple funding streams, so it is always advisable to check with local providers regarding their ESOL offer. As noted above, ESOL 'hubs', where operating, can help share information about different kinds of provision with different eligibility criteria.

*ESOL for Refugees: A Toolkit for Commissioners and Practitioners*¹⁷ by Migration Yorkshire contains a useful summary of AEB and other funding sources for ESOL provision.

New to ESOL Practitioners

- Sector consultation for the development of this framework suggested that some providers use less experienced teachers to teach New to ESOL learners, on the basis that less expertise is required to teach very elementary English. However, the majority of ESOL practitioners consulted during the

¹⁵ <https://www.gov.uk/government/publications/essential-digital-skills-framework>

¹⁶ At the time of writing, Mayoral Combined Authorities with devolved Adult Education Budget commissioning powers are: Cambridgeshire and Peterborough, Liverpool City Region, Greater Manchester, North of Tyne, West of England, West Midlands, and Tees Valley.

¹⁷ <https://www.migrationyorkshire.org.uk/esoltoolkit>

New to ESOL research emphasised that, due to the complex needs of New to ESOL learners, teachers need appropriate expertise, skills and experience, and in-depth subject knowledge.

- Initial English language teacher training qualifications do not include preparation for teaching basic literacy. Practitioners recommended that New to ESOL teachers would benefit from specialist training, including how to teach literacy with ESOL learners.
- Learners' ability to learn can be affected by many other issues such as trauma and mental ill health. Practitioners should be given training in recognising signs and referring learners appropriately.

Teaching and Learning

This guidance is focussed on outcomes and does not include specific teaching and learning activities or approaches. The New to ESOL resources contain further guidance on these to support practitioners. Some overarching considerations in the approach to teaching and learning are that:

- Due to the diverse learning needs of the New to ESOL cohort, it is likely that a highly differentiated approach to teaching and learning will be needed. Providers and practitioners will need to ensure variety in the methods, approaches and resources used in lessons to meet different learning needs. This will be particularly important where practical constraints, such as the number of learners in a particular location, limit the scope to group learners or offer a variety of different courses according to different needs.
- Given the diversity of learning needs within New to ESOL provision, New to ESOL learners placed in mixed level classes (e.g. with Entry 1 learners) are likely to struggle to make progress. Where this is unavoidable for practical reasons, effective differentiation is essential and providers should consider additional support for these learners, for example by deploying smaller class sizes, and/or appropriately trained classroom assistants to support learning.
- While New to ESOL learners may have little knowledge of English, or no previous education, they are not 'empty vessels'. As adult learners, they bring with them a large body of knowledge and understanding which can be used to base learning on. Lessons should be planned around learners and their lives, immediate needs, future plans and ambitions.
- Bi- and multi-lingual approaches can be useful. Use of learners' first or additional language(s) can help put learners at ease, allow for more complex explanations and instructions, and help learners relate what they know about their own languages to learning English. Recognising learners' bi- or multilingualism as an asset, rather than presenting lack of English as a deficit, can also boost learners' motivation. Fully bi- or multilingual delivery may be challenging to operate due to practical constraints, such as the availability of staff with relevant language skills, or the range of languages used by learners in a single ESOL class. However, there are resources available that can help practitioners to use learners' own languages as a foundation for learning English (see Part 1, Further Resources).

Additionally, New to ESOL learners should receive high quality Information Advice and Guidance (IAG), provided in a suitable, accessible format. This may require translation or interpretation of key information. High quality IAG supports progression into further learning and employment, for example by identifying relevant work-related skills and experience. It can also help practitioners to deliver sessions that are relevant and contextualised to learners' broader aspirations. (See Part 1, Further Resources for additional resources).

New to ESOL Outcomes

- The most likely outcome of 'Pre-Entry ESOL' will be development of language skills and knowledge to enable progression onto an Entry 1 ESOL programme. Suggested outcomes for listening, speaking, reading and writing skills are included in Part 2.
- There is a range of other outcomes that ESOL learning is likely to have, including steps towards employment, digital skills development, improved confidence and wellbeing, and social integration. In this framework, these are referred to as 'wider outcomes'. Possible outcomes measures and approaches are included in Part 2.
- Delivery of employment-related outcomes is often a key priority in the commissioning of ESOL provision. Finding work or securing better work is also a strong motivation for many learners to improve their English. Stakeholder consultation for the development of this framework highlights that learners at New to ESOL level are unlikely to have sufficient English language skills to be able to work independently in an English-language workplace, and some may be vulnerable to exploitation through lack of knowledge or understanding of workplace rights and regulations in the UK.
- This framework therefore suggests that the main employment-related outcome of New to ESOL learning is increased language proficiency. However, as some New to ESOL learners do work (for example in workplaces where other languages are used), direct measures of employment outcomes are included in the framework for use in settings where it is relevant or required to monitor these.

FURTHER RESOURCES

Teaching and Learning Resources for New to ESOL Learners

The Education and Training Foundation has produced a range of resources to support practitioners working with learners who are New to ESOL.

The New to ESOL Guidance contains a full directory of further resources, identified as useful by practitioners working with learners at this level. New to ESOL also includes teaching and learning materials and an ESOL phonics pack.

<https://esol.excellencegateway.org.uk/learners-new-esol>

ETF has also produced a set of resources aimed specifically at refugee learners who have recently arrived in the UK and are working at New to ESOL level.

<https://esol.excellencegateway.org.uk/esol-refugees>

ETF has also produced Post-16 Phonics Approaches: A Toolkit. The toolkit has been specifically designed for the post-16 sector, exploring approaches to phonics teaching, the essential concepts, how to assess learners' needs and resources designed for adult learners.

<https://www.excellencegateway.org.uk/content/etf3030>

The Education and Training Foundation also has a range of courses and webinars to support the delivery of ESOL online. The current offer can be viewed at:

<https://booking.etfoundation.co.uk/course/search>

Literacy Education and Second Language Learning for Adults (LESLLA) supports adults with little or no home language schooling or literacy who are learning to read and write for the first time in a new language. It promotes, worldwide, the sharing of research findings, effective pedagogical practices, and information on policy.

<https://www.leslla.org/>

On multilingual approaches to teaching ESOL, see the Our Languages project website.

<http://ourlanguages.co.uk/>

English My Way is a resource for tutors who support and teach adults with no or low levels of English.

<https://www.englishmyway.co.uk/>

For guidance on identifying and working with ESOL learners who have a learning difficulty or disability, the following resources may be useful:

ESOL Access for All

<https://www.excellencegateway.org.uk/content/etf2356>

Futurelearn video: dyslexia and foreign language teaching

<https://www.futurelearn.com/courses/dyslexia/0/steps/15675>

ESOL for Refugees: A Toolkit for Commissioners and Practitioners by Migration Yorkshire offers guidance on effective practice in ESOL for refugees, with much of the content relevant for other kinds of ESOL provision.

<https://www.migrationyorkshire.org.uk/esoltoolkit>

Teaching and Learning - Further Reading

Mitchell, R., M. Myles and E. Marsden (2019) Second Language Learning Theories. 4th Edition. London: Routledge

Peyton, J. K. and M. Young-Scholten (Eds.) (2020) Teaching Adult Immigrants with Limited Formal Education: Theory, Research and Practice. Bristol: Multilingual Matters.

Spiegel, M. and H. Sunderland (2006) Teaching Basic Literacy to ESOL Learners. London: LLU+

Awarding Organisations

Some awarding organisations offer qualifications intended for use in 'pre-Entry' ESOL provision. These all assess speaking and listening skills. Some also assess reading, writing and classroom and study skills.

Trinity College London ESOL Step 1 and Step 2

<https://www.trinitycollege.com/qualifications/english-language/ESOL-Step-1-and-Step-2>

Gateway Pre-ESOL Award

<https://www.gatewayqualifications.org.uk/qualification-area/esol/>

Ascentis Introduction to Learning for Speakers of Other Languages (Non-regulated Pre-Entry ESOL qualification)

<https://www.ascentis.co.uk/qualifications/introduction-to-learning-for-speakers-of-other-languages>

Outcomes Measures and Approaches

A number of toolkits, resources and research reports are available to support the identification of suitable outcomes measures, and approaches to implementation.

Home Office Indicators of Integration

<https://www.gov.uk/government/publications/home-office-indicators-of-integration-framework-2019>

Ministry of Housing, Communities and Local Government Integrated Communities Outcomes Measurement Guide

<https://www.gov.uk/government/publications/technical-note-measuring-outcomes-for-integrated-communities>

Social Metrics: Measuring the Outcomes of Non-accredited Learning

<https://www.learningandwork.org.uk/wp-content/uploads/2019/06/Social-Metrics-Report.pdf>

Community Learning Mental Health Research Project

<https://www.gov.uk/government/publications/community-learning-mental-health-research-project>

Evaluation of Community-Based English Language provision pilots

<https://www.learningandwork.org.uk/resource/evaluation-of-community-based-english-language-cbel-provision-pilots/>